

THE BIBLIOTHÈQUE NORDIQUE

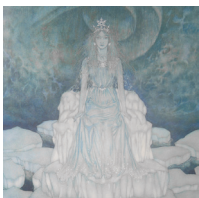

Open to everyone, the Bibliothèque nordique - the Fenno-Scandinavian collection in the bibliothèque Sainte-Geneviève - provides its users with the largest collection in Europe, outside the countries concerned, specialising in the Scandinavian and Finno-Ugric languages and civilisations.

Today, the Bibliothèque nordique conserves, enriches, and provides almost 180,000 books and 3,412 periodical titles, some of which can be borrowed for home use, and is the reference collection in the field of Nordic studies for researchers and the general public.

Created by the bequest, in 1868, of the library of Alexandre Dezos de la Roquette, French Consul to Denmark and Norway, this collection has constantly grown since the end of the nineteenth century thanks to interaction with Scandinavian institutions. In 2017, the collection was officially designated as an outstanding collection ('Collection d'Excellence', 'CollEx') and was enriched with many documents in Lithuanian.
